INDUSTRY

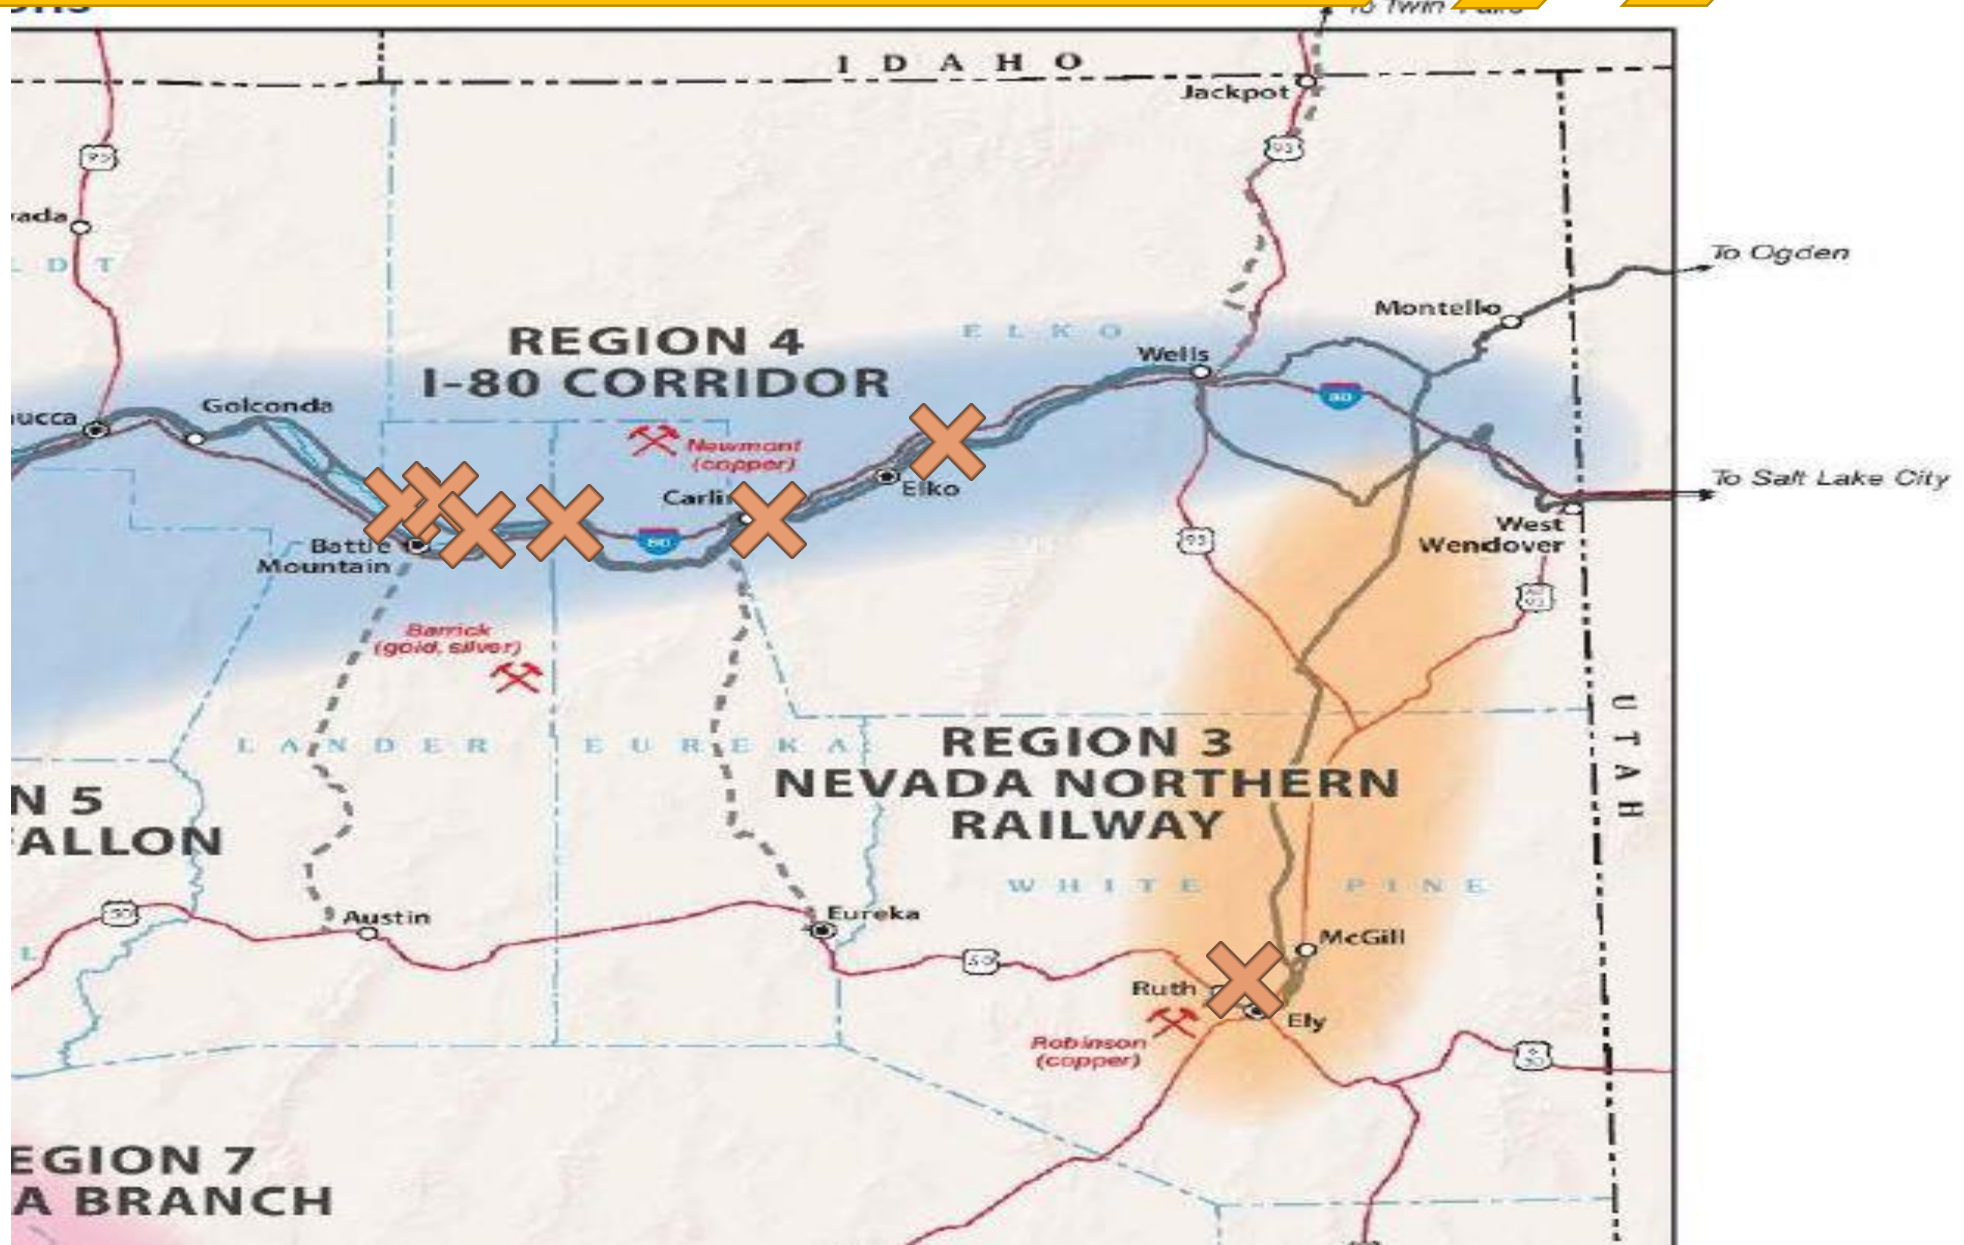

The “Silver State” is actually one of the world’s leaders in gold production... and nearly all of it comes from Northeastern Nevada. Further, recent exploration efforts have uncovered North America’s largest lithium deposit within the region drawing interest from both producers and manufactures of lithium based products. Gone are the days of the pick and shovel – 21st century mining is carried out using the latest technologies (automation, artificial intelligence, etc.) while adopting a commitment to safety and environmental protection.

Agriculture has been a staple in rural Nevada since the first pioneers traveled across the state along the California trail. Traditionally, cattle and the alfalfa needed to produce them have been the leading exports within the ag sector. However, new policy at the federal level has allowed producers to begin growing Industrial Hemp – a product that is used in multiple applications from energy drinks to skin cream. In 2019, Northeastern Nevada welcomed the United State’s largest Industrial Hemp producer into the region. In Northeastern Nevada, the future looks “GREEN”!

Northeastern Nevada is still Nevada so as you can imagine gaming, recreation, and tourism still play a major role in the local economy. Northeastern Nevada is home to the Ruby Mountains, aka “Nevada’s Swiss Alps” where a person can hike, camp, or heli-ski while the Great Basin National Park outside of Ely is known for the darkest skies in the continental U.S. In towns like West Wendover you can get a feel of vintage 1955 Las Vegas – a desert oasis with world class accommodations and entertainment... without the traffic or crowds. This is Northeast Nevada!
